Financial Aid Procedures for Non-FSU Study Abroad Students

Non-FSU students may qualify to receive financial aid, but you must contact your home school’s financial aid department to learn exactly how your school handles your request. Upon your request, your home school may initiate a Consortium Agreement with FSU.

The Consortium Agreement allows your home school to award financial aid even though you are registered for classes at a different school. If applicable, your home school’s financial aid office may require a paper Consortium Agreement to be sent to FSU. Your home school’s financial aid office may send this agreement directly to International Programs via fax (850.645.4659). You must notify us, in writing, of anything your home school may require of this office in order for them to process your financial aid.

Non-FSU students must check with their home institution to determine which types of aid may or may not be used for overseas study with Florida State University but, in general, non-FSU students may not use tuition waivers (in/out of state) and College Work Study.

Non-FSU students may be eligible to defer up to 50% of the final program fee balance; excluding the application fee and commitment fee, so long as sufficient aid has been awarded to cover the requested deferment amount.

Non-FSU students who wish to defer fees must:

1. Pay 50% of the final program fee balance due (within the published deadline).

Complete the online deferment request located in the International Programs Student Portal. The fee deferment is a legal and binding agreement. Submission comes with fee liability in accordance with our fee liability and refund policy. Cancellation from the program does not remove fee liability as stated in our fee liability and refund policy.

2. Non-FSU students should check with their home school financial aid office to learn how their aid will be disbursed.

Non-FSU students should contact their home school financial aid office if you have questions.
